Crosscultural social club that brings together the international and domestic communities for lifelong learning and friendship

The International Friendship Program (IFP) joins Rutgers international students with American students and local community members in a comfortable environment that is conducive to cross-cultural friendship and learning. The program was initiated over 20 years ago and is continually evolving to provide the best forum possible for crosscultural exchange. Weekly group meetings provide international students with an opportunity to practice conversational English skills while domestic students can learn more about other cultures and languages without leaving Rutgers. For a full schedule of events or other ways to get involved, visit globalservices.rutgers.edu or find us on Facebook at facebook.com/IFP.

There are over 7,500 international students and scholars at Rutgers from more than 120 countries. The IFP, coordinated by the Center for Global Services at Rutgers' Centers for Global Advancement and International Affairs (GAIA Centers) provides a platform for learning and friendship among the international and domestic communities at Rutgers.
